

National Institution for Human Rights expresses its sincere appreciation to the royal directives of His Majesty the King on the re- rehabilitation of the accused and convicted youth and young persons

Manama, February 2, 2011

The National Institution for Human Rights its sincere appreciation to the royal directives of His Majesty the King to the Ministry of the Interior on the re- rehabilitation of the accused and convicted youth and young persons, which has to conducted through specially-tailored programs of education, training and awareness.

The NIHR stressed that His Majesty's Royal Order translates a real message and vision forming a vital axis of His Majesty's reform project, which essentially regards man himself as the basic building block in the community. It also emphasizes the depth of faith in the great issues of human rights, as a priority, and an essential pillar ahead of priorities and duties for national action. These rights have become clear through increased institutional mobility in recent years, aiming to consolidate the principles of human rights and install and develop promotion and protection frameworks and mechanisms of these rights. This reflects the growing level of interest in the importance of the issue of human rights and the primacy of continuing work to respond to all basic requirements.

On this occasion, the NIHR reaffirmed its national commitment to human rights issues and all requirements of their protection and the maintenance of national gains achieved in the field of human rights, expressing its willingness to work with the team at the Ministry of the Interior in the preparation of various rehabilitation programs, training courses and activities to achieve the directives of His Majesty the King.