Manama – 16 March 2025

On the occasion of Arab Human Rights Day, the Kingdom of Bahrain joins other Arab nations in celebrating this day on March 16th of every year, highlighting human rights in Arab countries and enhancing awareness of the fundamental rights and freedoms of all individuals. This day also serves as a reminder of the importance of addressing the needs of Arab peoples and the necessity of involving everyone in building a society based on justice and equality.

On this occasion, the National Institution for Human Rights (NIHR) commends the role of the Kingdom of Bahrain in supporting and promoting human rights. The Kingdom has made significant efforts in the legal domain to protect individual rights, safeguard fundamental freedoms, meet people's needs, and continuously supports international endeavors to enhance and protect human rights. This is based on a belief in the importance of respecting individual rights and applying standards of justice and equality without exception.

Furthermore, NIHR reaffirms its ongoing commitment to monitor and observe the adherence to international conventions and treaties that the Kingdom of Bahrain and other Arab countries have ratified in the field of human rights. The institution calls on all partners to collaborate in devising innovative solutions that bolster human rights and ensure sustainable development in the region.
